To Start With, Let's Remove The Colour

There's no shame in a bat-shit crazy exhibition every once in a while...walking into TBG&S you're welcomed by a 40s babelicious pin-up Woodcutter's daughter tied to a tree, waiting for the big bad wolf to get her. Saucy. Then there's the icy chest freezer, emanating a crude red light, probably reflecting all the bloody hacked-off limbs within. Prepare for a noisy fright courtesy of an antlered, television faced robot, covered in gauche Dutch pottery. Of course, to finish, there's a boy scout in hotpant-esque cut-offs, bent over, carrying a gun/tree trunk hybrid on his back. If this short article sounds like the witterings of a fool, I recommend you see it. You won't even know your abc afterwards. / Cora Burke
